By Darden North, MD
Ponder House Press

Delta native Dr. Darden North, a Jackson obstetrician and gynecologist, has plunged back into the world of publishing with the October release of his fiery second novel Points of Origin. North recently released his first novel, House Call, a murder mystery full of suspense. In North style, readers are again invited into the lives of the rich and not-so-rich characters who live in a quaint but greedy fictional town in Mississippi. This time readers are taken to Larkspur where they meet the Foxworth family. The story surrounds the tragic and happy times of the family, mainly the life of the handsome young Sher Foxworth, a former high school star quarterback and valedictorian. Readers meet his father, a successful plastic surgeon, his beautiful mother and wealthy grandparents. However, things aren't so perfect after the death of a girl takes the Foxworths' lives in a different direction. Meet all kinds of typical Mississippi characters and catch up with a few from House Call. Second chances, greed, affairs, arson, secrets, the meaning of connections, and more. In this book, what comes around goes around. (Denise Jones Grones) DU
